

What's New at Colorado Mountain College for the 2010-2011 school year?

CMC Online Application:

- Students can now apply directly to CMC online from our website www.coloradomtn.edu

New Programs:

- Associate of Science (AS) in Environmental Science: This program will prepare students to transfer into a four-year Environmental Science program or, based on electives selected, transfer to an environmentally-related program such as Geology, Environmental Engineering, or Environmental Health. This program will be offered at CMC in Steamboat Springs, and CMC at Spring Valley near Glenwood Springs.
- Associate of Arts (AA) in Theatre Arts: This program at CMC Spring Valley campus was started last year, and has grown steadily since then. Students can focus on any aspect of theatre: acting, directing, costume/set design, etc.
- Certificate of Completion in Sustainable Cuisine Operations I and II: SCO I introduces students to the rapidly expanding segment of foodservice operations based on dynamic sustainability. The curriculum includes many courses required for our AAS in Culinary Arts program, and can be applied toward that degree. SCO II is geared for professionals, and covers more details about implementing cost-effective measures that will enhance an operation's environmental and social impact while increasing profitability.

New Facilities:

- The Climax Molybdenum Leadership Center at CMC in Leadville is complete. This large building adds a much needed gymnasium, indoor climbing wall, classrooms, and a staging area for outdoor programs. At the highest elevated college campus in the US (10,200 ft), where winters can be...harsh, this building will be much appreciated by our students.
- CMC in Edwards campus is constructing a solar-powered greenhouse facility for use by our Culinary Arts and Sustainable Cuisine students. This is expected to be completed before the start of the 2011-2012 school year.
